

The Capital Hotel in Knightsbridge presents:

The Ash Aversion Package

With the Icelandic volcanoes causing havoc for holiday makers booking their European city breaks the solution is to revisit the attractions of our own country's capital city. Rich in history and culture and with arguably some of the best restaurants and shops in Europe it's high time we gave London its due attention.

For the perfect city break start by heading to The Capital Hotel in Knightsbridge for dinner in the esteemed Capital Restaurant and an overnight stay with breakfast. A 'grand hotel in miniature' The Capital has remained in the capable hands of David Levin and his family since its inception in 1969, enjoying a reputation that can claim the patronage of Her Majesty the Queen as recently as last year. Situated a hop, skip and a jump from Harrods department store and the glitz and glamour of Knightsbridge it boasts an unparalleled location.

Celebrating its 40th anniversary this year it is the perfect opportunity to be immersed in the elegant, traditional hotel that warrants repeat custom on the warmth of its welcome alone. Having nurtured the careers of many great chefs including Gary Rhodes and Eric Chavot, The Capital Restaurant is now under the strong leadership of Jérôme Ponchelle who, heralding from Dieppe in France but with 10 years as head chef at Wilton's, has put his own stamp on a predominantly French menu that has keen British influences.

If you're still hankering for shopping, culture or afternoon tea then there is ample time to sample the rest of London's delights before heading to the station for a leisurely trip to wherever your home may be without the inconvenience of ash clouds, air strikes or any other disasters...

For more information please contact Lucy Hayward at Sauce Communications on 0208 600 3600, lucyh@saucecommunications.com

Bed and Breakfast at The Capital Hotel in Knightsbridge starts from £265 bed & breakfast for a single room and £365 bed & breakfast for a double room.

The Capital Hotel, 22 Basil Street, London SW3 1AT www.capitalhotel.co.uk